55% of Babies, Toddlers Had 'Systemic Reaction' After COVID Vaccine, CDC Survey Shows

More than 50% of children ranging in age between 6 months and 4 years had a "systemic reaction" after the Pfizer-BioNTech or Moderna COVID-19 vaccine, according to data released Sept. 1 by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

More than 55% of children ranging in age between 6 months and 2 years had a "systemic reaction" after their first dose of the Pfizer-BioNTech or Moderna COVID-19 vaccine, according to data released Sept. 1 by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

In addition, almost 60% had a reaction to the second dose of the Moderna vaccine, in the CDC survey of more than 13,000 children.

A systemic reaction is a response beyond the injection site.

While the most common systemic reactions were fatigue, fever, irritability and crying, parents of more than 6% of the children in the study said their child was unable to perform normal activities after the second dose of either the Pfizer-BioNTech or Moderna vaccine.

The CDC collected the data through a program called V-Safe — a smartphone-based monitoring system that operates through an app that parents download to their phones.

Between June 18 and Aug. 21, parents of more than 10,000 young children reported reactions to the CDC through V-Safe in the seven days after their child had received a COVID-19 vaccination.

Parents of 8,158 children ages 6 months to 2 years who received the Moderna vaccine reported on reactions in the study, with 55.7% reporting a systemic reaction after the first dose and about 59% after the second dose.

For the Pfizer vaccine, parents of 4,768 children ages 6 months to 2 years submitted reports showing that 55.8% had a systemic reaction after the first dose and about 47% after the second dose of the vaccine.

The most frequently reported reactions for children 6 months to 2 years were irritability or crying, sleepiness and fever. The most common reactions for children ages 2 to 4 years were injection-site pain, fatigue and fever.

Health impacts

The data also showed a more serious reaction category labeled "any health impact."

About 10% of all children 6 months to 2 years were reported to have a "health impact" after getting their first dose of either the Moderna or Pfizer vaccine.

For the Moderna vaccine, slightly more children had a health impact after the second dose; for the Pfizer vaccine, it was slightly less.

The information was presented to the CDC's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices on Sept. 1 as part of an overview of data on vaccine safety.

In addition to V-Safe, data was presented summarizing reports from the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS) and the Vaccine Safety Data Link (VSD), which includes data from several large health maintenance organizations in the United States.

All three systems look at the safety of vaccines after they've already gone to market and have been administered to large numbers of people.

Tom Shimabukuro, the head of the CDC's vaccine safety team, headed the presentation and told committee members that no "statistical signals" of COVID-19 vaccine concerns were found for young children in the VSD data.

Shimabukuro also said that systemic reactions were "commonly reported" following vaccines.

However, other medical professionals such as Dr. Meryl Nass of Children's Health Defense have expressed concern over the reported reactions, pointing to the high number of systemic reaction reports among very young children.

She told The Epoch Times on Sept. 2 that the vaccines appear worse than the government-directed studies and present more information on these data.

"That stuff is not considered by the CDC to be very important ... It's assumed that all those side effects go away after a few days and leave the people perfectly well," she said, mentioning the fevers and fatigue.

"Those reactions may, in fact, be harbingers of more serious reactions, but nobody is my knowledge has published anything to look at whether these acute local or systemic reactions are indicators of a later problem."

The FDA approved the emergency-use authorization of COVID-19 vaccines for children aged 6 months to 5 years on June 17.

According to the CDC, about 599,460 children in that age group have received the Pfizer-BioNTech vaccine, and about 440,770 have received the Moderna vaccine.

In a review of the VAERS data on young children from June 18 to Aug. 31, the CDC had 496 reports of adverse events for children aged 6 months to 4 years who received the Pfizer vaccine and 531 for children aged 6 months to 5 years who received the Moderna shot, with an adverse event defined as a possible side effect.

More than 98% of reports were for what the CDC considers non-serious events.

There are 220 reports of persons aged 5 months to 5 years of age being taken to the emergency room following a COVID-19 vaccine.

In one case involving a 2-year-old boy in Arizona, the VAERS report says he was given the Pfizer vaccine on July 28 and died 3½ days later of a "life-threatening episode."

The report lists his symptoms as "clammy skin and vomiting leading (8 minutes) to difficulty breathing." The boy "turned blue," was "limp" and "non-responsive" and "fully stopped breathing for two minutes," according to the report.

He was received after-care compensation.

The parents of these children are morons... Why even consider having a child if one is too lazy to do a few minutes of actual research? Sadly, however, many of these innocent children will suffer greatly or die because of their parents irresponsibility... and let's not forget the role of the media and the mainstream. I mean Doctors who simply read their cheats and young children

The parents are not morons, they are terrified people in the grip of group-think who have been brainwashed by propaganda, fear, and the complete corruption of government agencies. They are trying to do the right thing, but are being coerced in subtle and not so subtle ways to "trust" unethical and unreliable sources.

Yes.... they are lazy, not looking into anything regarding these shots. It is their job before everything else, to carefully examine what is happening around them and their children.

I'm a nurse and I'm a doctor when they brought up vaccines during a well baby check-up visits..." and who will be responsible for caring for my baby if it has a bad reaction to the vaccine? Who will be responsible for paying for thatin filtering medical care?" They usually look at me like I'm crazy. I tell them that I'm not the one who is going to be responsible. I've been through the pediatricians until I found one who didn't dismiss me and my child as their patient. Do your homework, read about the reactions, know what they are putting in your children, know your child's constitution, feed them healthy food, no sugar, get them sleep, and if possible avoid vaccines. Once your child is toxic they will not even if they want to.

I think this is the result of corporate medicine. Doctors are now merely medical employees who must look the party line dictated by the company's lawyers, administrators and the states practicing doctor CEOs.

Good for you. We need more parents like you looking out for the welfare of their children and not just following orders.

Talk is cheap, and reality is messy.

Many parents of vaccine-injured children will tell you that they either rejected a vaccine or agreed to one and vaccine not the other, and then the nurse or doctor and went ahead and administered the unwanted vaccine anyway. It comforted, then shocked them. Many parents have been threatened with losing custody if they did not right by the list by overriding the parental objection. Kinda justify the means for those virtuous shots (pun intended).

In VAERS reports at
https://medalerts.org/vaers/
there are 1,000 DEATHS for <5.5 years old, both cases in connection with pregnancies. For the age group 0 to 5 YEARS there are 8 (EIGHT) VAERS reports of DEATHS. One is questionable, but seriously, how many more DEATHS and injuries have to happen before these vaccinations will be held responsible and the preprogrammed death rate is going to be stopped?

Why are they giving toxic reactions similar to being knocked unconscious. How many times can it be repeated before the insult is death or paralysis.etc?
Yet they want covid shots annually or more..same for flu..plus a 72 dose kid vaccine schedule..is the cure worse than the disease?

We study illness and disease, but not health. If we studied health, we might recognize that the vaccines are causing the opposite of health and we would know why. Health is a result of a set of conditions for health. But because we study disease, we have the illusion to reach a level of diagnosis - which generally means "a level at which no cure is possible" to your health. Iatrogenic.

Vaccines are not designed to make the best decisions. If a parent is a follower, has low IQ, is impatient, ask many questions and spend time and researches on what is real and what is a lie, then they will be the ones who run to the pushers and get their children jabbed.

If I heard of ONE child that was injured, or even DIED, by an experimental poison, I would not vaccinate my child. Why? Because I'm not willing to take the risk. Even if 99.9% of the ONLY HEALTHY, only to take the child from vacation and to Disneyland.

Why get an experimental jab that is now known to kill...Ignore that fact, and then get up my uncle's life to it?
